CHICAGO WINS DOUBLEHEADER

CHICAGO, July 9.—"Red" Urban Faber was given credit for two victories today when Chicago defeated Philadelphia in both games of a double header, 8 to 7, and 6 to 2. Faber's single in the eighth inning with two outs and the bases filled drove in two runs and clinched the first game. In the second game Faber kept the visitors' hits well scattered while his teammates bunched hits off Johnson.

THE OUTBURST OF EVERETT TRUE

LITTLE BENNY'S Note Book

By LEE PAPE

Ma was sewing in the setting room yesterday afternoon, and I went in saying, G. ma, what you got on your ear? And ma put her hand up to feel, saying, I don't know, wat? and I sed, Your hand, joak.

O shaw, wat's funny about that? sed ma. Meaning nothing was. And she kep on sewing, and after a while I sed, Wat's that on top of your head, ma?

Wat? sed ma putting her hand up, and I sed, Your hand, joak!

Dident I tell you that wasent funny?—now for that you can jest leave the room, sed ma. Wich I did, going out and setting on the top step out in the hall and wondering whether to keep on setting there, and the front door opened and my sister Gladis came in and started to come up stairs, and I sed, G. Gladis, you got something on your chin.

Wat? sed Gladis putting her hand up to feel.

Your hand, joak, I sed.

Youre so funny its all I can do not to laff rite out—shh, theres mother in there, she always bites at every thing, Ill try it on her, sed Gladis.

Wich she did, going in the setting room and saying, Mother, for goodness sakes, you got something on your nose.

Wat? sed ma, and Gladis sed, Your hand, joak.

Now izent this too bad? sed ma. Izent it enuff for Benny to do that to me twice without you trying it at your age?

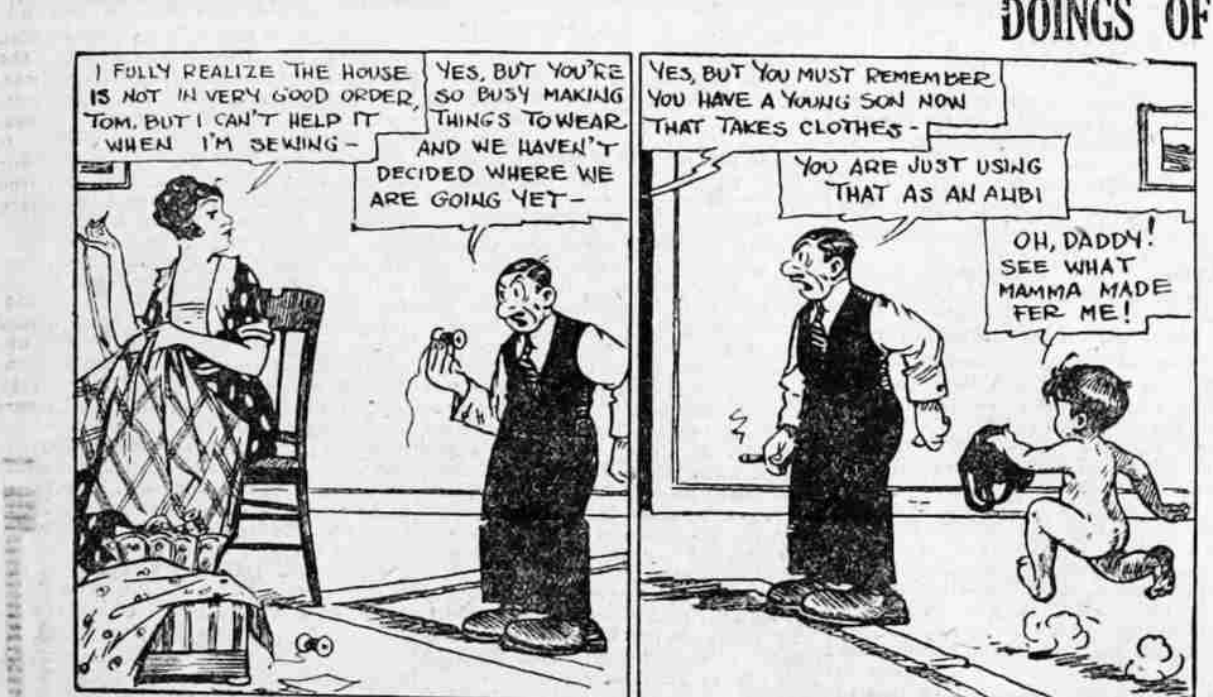

Wy, the little imp, sed Gladis, meaning me, and she went up to her own room, and jest then pop came in and started to come up stairs, me saying, You got something on your shoulder, pop, Wich pop quick put his hand up, and I sed, your hand, joak.

I lose, sed pop, and I whispered Wy dont you try it on ma, pop, shes rite in the setting room.

Leave it to me, sed pop. And he went in the setting room, saying, Holey smokes, mother, wat's that on your eye brow?

My hand, joak, now who's funny, you or me? sed ma, and pop sed, Ill teetch that fresh kid respect for his parents Benny, Benny.

Wich I was jest going out the front door and didnt hear him.

Luck

I often hear of lucky guys, for whom the fates have no rebuke; while some laboriously rise, they gain the summit by a fluke. They canter gaily up the road, unscarred, unbruised, while luckless men, are chafed and wearied by their load, and lost, or foundered in the fen. But when I meet the lucky cuss, and analyze and parse his curves, I find he's like the rest of us—he only gets what he deserves. He is a gent who sanely plans to gain an honor or a buck; and so he climbs, while also runs are grumbling sorely of his luck. He is a hustling delegate who is resolved to work and win; he moves along while others wait for some fake ship to saunter in. His wholesome ardor never flags, he yields to no fell circumstance; while human failures shake their rags and say they never had a chance. The kind of luck this fellow sees will stick with him through life, I guess; for it is based on qualities that evermore command success. The faker with the gilded brick may think he's lucky for a day, but all his profits vanish quick, and all his honors fade away. Luck's not confined to neighborhoods, to humble shack or fretted hall; if you're the guy who has the goods, you'll find luck at your beck and call.
